Canada—The Fishery Question.

From the Times. The writer of the letter from Canada which we printed on Saturday is well informed upon the matters referred to, and his statements are therefore entitled to very careful attention.

The most important of our correspondent's statements, however, relates to the fisheries, and the course which the Canadian authorities are represented as willing to pursue to avert difficulty.

Kentucky Democracy.

From the Tribune. We do not deem it wholly a misfortune that the Rebel Democracy of Kentucky have reorganized, and will probably take possession of the State.

The convention in Louisville on Tuesday manifestly expects an election, and the managers had been in doubt, they would have held a Union force foremost—as they tried to do during the war, when a great proportion of their rank and file were in the Confederate armies.

The radicals profess to be incredulous; this is impossible, they say, but they are none the less alarmed. If Stanton deserts us, who will be left? This is the question.

We assure the people of the State more seriously imperiled now than they have been since the ruthless hordes of Buckner and Bragg were trampling down our soil.

The success of this party in the August election is rightly anticipated as a vindication of the Rebellion, and as the restoration of the secessionist Breckinridge Democracy.

We have already given an abstract of the resolutions adopted. They are silent on questions of State administration, but loud voiced on matters of national policy, and on what Kentucky will do or refuse to do if her will is unhindered at Washington.

As against such an end we enter our solemn protest, and denounce the radical majority in Congress as false and recreant to the Constitution, as men who have resolved either to surrender the rights of the people of one section of the country, and make vassals of its citizens, or to destroy the Union of the States.

Secretary Stanton's Comp. & Bat.—The Radicals Flanked.

Galileo was right. The world does move. The great gun of the radicals in the Cabinet, supposed to be as firm as a rock, has been turned against them.

The incorrigible and bloodthirsty knave who now disgraces the gubernatorial chair of Tennessee, in the near future, the expiration of his term of office, and it is he, doubtless, who is at the bottom of all this impudent and treasonable talk of splitting Tennessee into halves.

Danton, like Stanton, from the profession of a lawyer, became a republican leader, and is liable for his energy and terrible activity against the rebels and copperheads of his day; but Danton, in pleading for mercy to the Girondins, brought upon himself the wrath of Robespierre, and for that reason he set his undertakings to work to mitigate the question of the partition of Tennessee.

Letters to H. G.

From the World. There seems to be a perfect mania on the part of some Southerners to write letters to Horace Greeley, as if that modest philosopher had not explained himself very often, or as if he were accessible to an argument or capable of a conclusion.

Before the war, at least, there were four millions of human beings in the Southern States who were no more citizens nor parts of the people than the Gladiators were citizens of Rome.

Now, when this proposition is presented to H. G., as a basis of argument, how does he meet it? With a shrug.

In the first place, he denies that the people of the South are the black and nothing to say about it. They had nothing to say about the secession from Great Britain in 1776, and the slaves always helped the British just as they helped the Union Army.

But again: H. G. insists that the people of the States were not in favor of secession, and would like to have had a popular vote on the ordinance. What are we to conclude from such an assertion? Why, naturally, that the great popular majority, that secession was right.

When before did the victors in so mighty a struggle as to the vanquished, let us henceforth be equal? What Mr. Greeley has for many years struggled to make an inequality between himself and Governor Perry, and has succeeded.

The "tag" of the letter is peculiarly Greeleyish and not at all Horatian. "When before did the victors in so mighty a struggle as to the vanquished, let us henceforth be equal?"

The little scheme seems to have been for a long time in contemplation. The plan was concocted during what the learned Judge calls "the dark hour of the Rebellion," and has been held in reserve ever since.

As far as we can judge from the telegraphic summary of the "proceedings," there was but one individual present in the "Convention" who seemed to have a gleam of common sense, not to mention common decency, about him.

The cool effrontery of James in putting this damper upon the harmonious proceedings of the "Convention" was promptly rebuked by having his "resolution" almost unanimously voted down, as we gather from the telegraphic account.

As far as we can judge from the telegraphic summary of the "proceedings," there was but one individual present in the "Convention" who seemed to have a gleam of common sense, not to mention common decency, about him.
